Gravity Falls Main Title Theme - Single version Adjust Regular version Weirdmageddon The "Gravity Falls main title title" Composed of Brad Bececk, it is the opening theme song played on the title sequence at Gravity Falls. The official theme song is available on iTunes for $ 0.99. [1] Starting with "Mystery of the Northwest Mansion", an abbreviated version of the theme is used in the episodes that are very long of usual. [2] The episodes "Weirdmageddon" use a damaged version of the song. Versions Normal version This is the main main title used in every episode of season 1 and most of the episodes of season 2. are 41 seconds long and plays after cold opening. Abbreviated version An abbreviated version of the main title - 15 seconds a long time instead of normal 41 - is used in the most long episodes of the usual. [2] These are: weirdmageddon versions The episodes of Arc Stormageddon Story use damaged versions of the theme song, along with apocalyptic opening sequences that show destruction and strange changes the falls of gravity suffers during the event, as a later waterfall o The statue of Paul Bunyan alive, and many images and bill references. "Weirdmageddon Part 1" uses an opening sequence that replaces every single main character with Bill and the friends of him. In this apocalyptic version, the painting is the only character normally in the opening screen that appears yet: it is seen as a human skeleton wearing the blue and white pine hat that appears instead of the normal skeleton of the horned monster, even if Only as a similarity. The Bill Cipher page is seen with a hole in which the photo of Bill should be, annuing to the fact that he has finally inserted the world of Gravity Falls. "Weirdmageddon Part 2" uses an abbreviated version of the song of the corrupt theme and the opening sequence. "Weirdmageddon Part 3" also uses the song and the corrupt sequence, but has regular images for the introduction of scoop, Mabel and Stan. Rock version in "Weirdmageddon part 3." during the battle of Shacktron against the Bill's Henchmaniacs, a wide rock version of the song is used with a single electric guitar. [3] Gravity Paws Version at Gravity Falls Series Commercial Final [4] with Gravity Paws puppies Recreate the 'Opening broadcast during the Planet Animal PlaneÀ € à, ~ à "€ bow! puppy XII. [5] The song features bellows for dogs and howls. Songs not used and alternative themes A music demo coil for show was released in 2011 by Dan Cantrell [6] with singers singing the title of the show. Neil Cicierega also made two other themed songs. [7] [8] There were two other themes considered for gravity falls: one instrumental and the other lyric. [9] These have been relegated to BreecK's work. BreecK also composed an alternative theme song that in the end would have been used in 2014 San Diego Comic with trailerÀ € for next season. "He realized me" is commonly wrong for the extended version of Gravity Falls themed song. It is also indicated on the BreecK website that the two songs are really different and unrelated to each other. Gravity Falls Main Title Thematic Animaticgravity Falls Main title Thematic Title And Final Comparison Version Without Text Used In Some Areas In some areas, the opening title was remained with text. For example, in Germany (S1E1-S1E13) and in Italy (S1E1-S2E13) (S1E1-S2E9), the following were removed and kept in white: "Gas" on the "Gravity Falls" service station sign on the Tower Dell "Water "Speedy Beaver" on the "Be amazed!" bus and the whole "danger" sticker "cash" on the cashier of Stan "Sale" Sticker on the "Boyz" eye on the Mabel magazine in France, a version without text is It was used after adding the following: "Essence" on the gas sign of the "Gravity Falls" station on the Water Tower "Sotez Emanvelles!" On "Be amazed!" Sign and "danger" sticker while in some areas like Poland (S1E1-S1E13), Israel (S1E1-S2E17), Taiwan & Hong Kong (S1), "Mabel" on the Mabel Sweater was also removed and kept empty. What probably caused this is that Disney wanted every version to take his own tongues on opening, but some have done. Intro sightings: "Gravity Falls main title" Trivia See also: list of allusions in Gravity Falls theme song. Regular version There is a quick look of a great hairy figure that seems to be Bigfoot. Towards the end of the song, a whisper plays and looks like "I'm still here". But if you play backwards, the whisper is revealed to be "three letters back". It is so that the crystings are resolved at the end of each episode. In "double meter dipheater", a new message is whispered: "Switch a with z." It is an explanation to the AI figure. Starting from "bottomless pit!" The whisper changes in "26 letters", a reference to the replacement cryptogram of the "A1Z26" style, which uses the numbers to stand for the letters of the alphabet. In the season 2, starting with "scary-oke", the whisper is now "key vigenÀ re", referring to the fact that encryption at the end is a vigenous encryption that requires a keyword hidden in every episode . In "not what it seems," the whisper has changed to "not what it seems". Towards the end of the theme song when the title is presented, a stamp can be seen close to it. The number 618 can be seen on it, which is a number repeating in the show. In the episode "small cod", just before cutting the theme's song when the pines are discussing what else look at TV, Mabel states that "the song of the theme is [the of her] part of her favorite her". The cryptogram at the end of the song is "Stan is not what it seems". The television version of the song presents the whisper and a flashing scene of an official official page 2 with Bill on it. But the animated version has not whispered and instead of the diary page, a hand of six fingers is displayed with the number 3 and astrological symbols everywhere. The photographs in gravity fall the theme song. While the images are thrown down, you can see different of the show, including the gravity drops the water tower, a gnome, Gideon, Gleaful, Blendin Blandin, summer trick and pterodactyl. More photos portray mythical creatures from North America's folklore, including fiji siren, jackalops and bat boy. Alex Hirsch's lower half face is seen in one of the many photos among the Jackalops and the hand of the hand witch. [10] On some international ventilation of the show, and on SAT, the whisper at the end was not heard. The earmark has a sticker that says Piedmont on it, referencing the Christmas city of Alex Hirsch. The scoop seems to inspect some runes or symbols before it is surprised by the skeleton. The symbols look similar to those of the game "Mystery Shack Mystery". The symbols are (from top to bottom) the Norwegian runes for U, M, O and A. The Runico symbol for "o" (as mentioned above) is from Elder Futhark. À "ODAL" and means non-mobile properties or properties. It's the last symbol in the Futhark. In two different scenes, the painting seems to have much thicker eyebrows. At the end of the theme, Bill Cipher's home page in the Journal 2 flashes, to the point that the character lines seem to be returned to the screen and fade from the outside inwards, after the screen turns black. There are some changes between the song of the animatic theme and the official theme: in the animatic version, Mabel and Merlotter arrive on a "Fast Dog" bus. It has changed to "rapid beaver" in the final version. One of the photos seems to be a robot, but it was replaced with Summerween makeup. The photo of the gnome has a bite from the right side. There is a photo of three spaceships and a monster, but they have been replaced with the pterodile image and a clawed hand. (The image of three spaceships is flashing on the body of Bill Cipher in "Dreamscapers".) The totem pole is on the left side of the mystery cabin in the animated version, while it is on the right side on the final version. The matrix in the final opening image [11] represents a scalar matrix, rotation and translation (also known as a transformation matrix), used to perform linear transformations. A clip towards the end of the gravity falls the theme song shows the gravity that rises and falls (so the gravity falls) with Mabel lying down to the ground and merlus to pave the reading of the diary. This is an allusion to episode 11 of the season 2 "not what it seems," and also makes reference to the song of the theme directly An increasing black sphere in both clips, even if the twins are sleeping in the actual episode. Starting from "a story of two stas", the sequence of the complete title has the image of a pterodactile replaced with a photo by Ford Pines Holding Journal # 1. The animation was made by James Baxter, better known to animate Ariel, Belle, Rafiki and Quasimodo among other characters. Versions of WeirdmeadDon The title card flickers from "Gravity Falls" to "Judylwb ldoov", which, using the Caesar figure of the show, translates into "Gravity Falls". The enrollment of the water tower also changes "Judylwb ldoov". Instead of Bigfoot they appear for a frame, there is a pine tree on foot. This could be due to the fact that the pines are those that are now hidden, instead of paranormal phenomena. It can also be just a passage of the places of Bigfoot and pines in the normal version. Where it would normally say "created by Alex Hirsch", in the Apocalypse version, he says "created by Bill Cipher". When the first apocalyptic version is reproduced backwards, Bill can be heard by saying the words "I'm looking at your nerds". The second said it only "I'm watching you!" Playing much more angry. The last says that "Bye Bye Gravity Falls", since it is also the final episode of the series. The man at the stamp in the end is replaced with the skeleton of him. He also makes the same poses of the images. (Not counting one of them) the vane with aÀ €? Mark and four letters that say "what" is replaced with a body image of Bill and four letters now Ormming the name of him. He can also be listened to laughing in the background. 8 Ball, teeth, lock hole and Hectorgon Everyone replaces the ladle (even if the skeleton of him can be seen), Mabel and Stan, in the introduction. The lock hole running with a box full of keys and the falling keys is similar to how Stan runs with the cash register and dollar bills fall. Hectorgon till the hat also replaces Stan by moving his eye patch to his left eye. The monster in the fire scene is replaced with Bill. People now get mad in the same scene I am now Grendinator, Blubs Sheriff, Manly Dan and Tyler. The page that has held the bill in the past is now torn with the FIR in the shape of the Bill's body. Cryptogram during the theme song, there is a cryptogram that reads "WWDQ LV ORW ZKDW KH VHHPV". Once decoded, jaw "Stan is not what he seems to." Gallery Click here to view the gallery of this page.
