"The past is never dead. It's not even past."

—Gavin Stevens in William Faulkner's Requiem for a Nun, act I, scene iii

Food chain	Food Web
Food chain is defined as the phenomenon of transfer of energy through series of organisms falling on successive trophic levels.	Food web is an interconnection of food chains which shows relation between them.
2. In food chains, usually member of high trophic level feed upon a single type of organism of lower trophic level.	In food web members of higher trophic level feed upon many organisms of lower trophic level.
3. In food chains, separate and isolated food chains increase the instability of the ecosystem.	<ol> <li>In food web, stability of the ecosystem increases by the presence of complex food webs.</li> </ol>
4. It comprises of only one chain.	4. It comprises of many chains.
5. Removal of one group of organism disturbs the whole chain.	5. Removal of one group of organism not at all disturbs food web.

To accommodate to that TV network start narrowcast. They focused one group of people and aired what they want to see, it becomes very hard for them to agree with the views of the group. ¢ÃÂÂIf you have a steady diet of items form Fox News and The Drudge Report, your belief that Barack Obama is not a U.S. citizen will be perfectly safe.¢Ã (Seife, 299). News websites like CNN.com, BBC.com monitors, what kind of things people look at and then when they visit the website next time, website shows, what they want to see. This cause to limit people from learning new things¢Ã¦ÂShow more content¢ÃÁ¦ÂThe author provides clear explanation on the issue at hand, which is how the internet make isolated or close-minded. Now days, everybody has a way to be connected to the worldwide web. The issue at hand affects everybody in the world. Whether, someone is 14-year-old or much older a 24-year-old. The author started the essay with giving examples about how people so closely connected to their beliefs, that they aren¢ÃÂÂt willing to change it by any means. Then he starts writing about the major issue in this essay; which is the internet. The author thinks that internet makes people more isolated. Then he provides the reader with reasoning behind his claims. Seife writes that, internet solves the audience issue, because the worldwide web is endless. Anybody can be reached from anywhere from the planet. One of the example he uses is the twitter, in a tweet can be see everyone who uses twitter. The author also recognizes the opinions of the opposition. He also agrees with this to some extent. The author uses for any pathos in this essay. Much of this is based on facts and reasoning. Thus, the use of ethos and logos are present in this essay. Which is based on facts and reasoning. Thus, the use of ethos and logos are present in this essay. that he began the essay with the way people were very well looked after before and how then show how the interconnected. His purpose in writing this piece is to give readers a new and new vision. The use of a quote at the beginning of his writing helps him draw the reader's attention and give a glimpse of the theme he will address: human interaction. The evidence it provides gives its credibility of writing and further supports its purpose of educating/informing all aspects of information, including its impacts on the interactions of "common" societies and beliefs. Seife explains that although people feel comfort in numbers, there is loneliness because their crowd becomes limited. It encourages others to question in society. People are caught in their own information bubble because of how media markets specifically for each individual. The author highlights the narrowness that the media created and explains that although the internet is very useful, Seife then provides a contrasting view that explains the destruction and isolation that progresses from the vastness of the internet. But that page turns! Using a short paragraph of the concise sentence: "Then came the internet", the author clearly separates the description of life before the example of life after impact by the web. Close to the endSeife's tone becomes more of how inescapable impacts and affect everyone. It also increases the effect using historical examples throughout the path at the XXI. This peãão makes people more aware than wool, because anyone can find anything they want on the internet if they look hard enough and it is common for people prefer to seek information. NOTE: It is a good thing that I just looked up € common for people prefer to seek information that supports their opinion. analyzed this as a propositional error of â € cemark zuckerberg as €. If this were the case, the goal of deceiving the name of Zuckerberg may be surprising readers with the extension of the range that fame and money can give to someone. So much so that readers would recognize the confusion of his name almost instantly, getting an important message. The solidarity of the interconnected by Charles Seife is an essay that is based on the compliance of our minds in the omnipotent social fora. Seife concludes that the interconnected by Charles Seife is an essay that is based on the compliance of our minds in the omnipotent social fora. Seife first build its credibility claiming that the internet was originally served with the purpose of exploring, thinking and challenging, understanding one side of the perspective. However, Seife states that Momia makes today's society isolate itself within our own thoughts. Seife's voice conveys the question of being â € œConfortary €. It uses facts to demonstrate how TV notion, such as CNN, Fox News and MSNBC, have a vião that only appeal to a subgroup of the population. By providing evidence, the author convinces readers that Momia is biased. Seife uses examples, such as Google's search engine, to portray how the internet can corrupt and narrow our mind. Wrapped enough, the web search engine handles future links that is more likely to find it. In addition, Seife uses an extreme example, such as the prohibition of the anti-HIV vaccine in South Fr. . Seife informs his bullshit that settling in a comfort zone is dangerous because before we learn to use the internet correctly, the internet is using us. Although Seife's tone puts fear in the readers' pill, it also defines a tone of hope. The internet is full of more than million sources that are disposingable, that is, if someone is willing to break outside its comfort of your search engine and be challenged. In addition, the internet should be used to dispute, explore and help modern Momdia to reduce the close mind. The statement of Seife, â € œHow is not affecting our opinions is not information; Its rifle, conveys that not all intelligent reviews promote knowledge. I believe that the main objective of this essay of Seife was to confront, challenge and help create dispute with each other to progress in our beliefs and grow as a society. society.
